ROCKET BLASTER, the anticipated single release of alternative rock band, FARRIS, is anything but subtle. Although the wild, in your face, radio-ready rock song is laden with social uproar, and references to the US presidential race, its undeniable hook, driving guitars, and infectious beat are captivating music industry players.

Singer-songwriter Kathleen Farris' raucous call for peace and action, grabs you close, and pleads "PUT AWAY YOUR GUNS AND YOUR ROCKET BLASTERS, ANGER ONLY KILLS US FASTER!"

FARRIS is the inspiration, the wisdom, and the understanding that comes from miles of movement.

The face of FARRIS, singer-songwriter Kathleen Farris, formed the band in the Netherlands in 2011, after arriving from Kenya where she had lived and worked as an infectious disease researcher for the US government.

She first fine-tuned her craft of lyrical storytelling through writing poetry and absorbing the country-music infused influences of her Texas upbringing.

She left Texas for Washington DC and rubbed elbows with high level government executives by day and performing her simple songs on street corners by night.

This led to her famed 40 40 40 tour where she "toured" 40 different street corners in Washington DC for 40 days, as a protest against the difficult to find places to play as a lesser-known artist. Fans followed her 2-hour nightly show from corner to corner with amplifier, microphone, guitar, and CDs to sell in tow.
